Daytona Beach Tourism 2017 Marketing Plans Shift into High Gear

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (December 5, 2016) – Plans to market the Daytona Beach and Volusia County, Fla. area are getting a boost in 2017 that will help bring even more visitors racing to Daytona Beach.

After compiling the results of recent focus groups, the Daytona Beach Area Convention and Visitors Bureau (CVB) will be meeting with Volusia County staff to strategize on how the data can be used countywide to build visitation and air traffic from key markets – including new ones in Boston, Philadelphia and perhaps Chicago.

With an additional $280,000 collected in bed tax in fiscal year 2015/2016 over the estimated budget of $7.75 million, the Halifax Area Advertising Authority (HAAA) board approved a marketing plan for the additional bed tax dollars at its December 1 meeting. The plan is designed to enhance the current advertising, communications and group sales plans for the coming year. The Volusia County Council will review the plan at an upcoming meeting.

In addition, plans to enlist Danica Patrick as a destination spokesperson are still underway. A contract has been signed and scripts have been approved. The date and location of the photo shoot has not been confirmed. The contract allows the video segments produced to run for a full year on the CVB's digital platforms including websites, Facebook, Twitter and YouTube channels, as well as in email and editorial content. In addition, Patrick will post about Daytona Beach on her own social media channels.

"This is a great opportunity for our destination to tap the 92 million social media reach Danica Patrick brings to the table," said Daytona Beach Area Convention and Visitors Bureau Executive Director Lori Campbell Baker. "Her brand is positive, empowering and inspiring, and she effectively reaches decision makers who will bring their families to the Daytona Beach area. It's a very exciting project for us."

Over 9.5 million visitors came to Daytona Beach in 2015, spending $5.4 billion. Figures for 2016 are set to be released in May, but the lodging industry alone currently employs 2,600 people, producing a payroll of $51 million. Tourism overall produces 41,000 jobs in Volusia County with an overall payroll of $500 million. Forty percent of local sales tax collected in Volusia County is paid by tourists.
